[11:19 AM] Don Ford

They are challenging to map, and we have no hydrogeologic field staff

Might have missed this...but were swamps included in this layer?

(2 liked)

[11:26 AM] Thomas Sciscione

...and ephemeral wetlands too?

[11:26 AM] Nadine Abrams

Is this updated wetland layer the same as our existing wetland layer? Meaning, has the existing layer been updated with this new information?

[11:27 AM] Nadine Abrams

Same question as above for the "water body" layer

[11:37 AM] Nadine Abrams

Ah, so draft layers are available.... do you know when they might become "live" as in, when they might become part of our daily GIS layers that we use?

[11:37 AM] Dean Young

Will the WRS layers be available on TRCA ArcGIS viewer as well?

(2 liked)

[11:44 AM] Tony Morris

Since the Water Resource System is a provincial policy requirement, our municipal partners will be identifying the WRS as part of their Official Plans (they are required to identify these components for their long-term protection). They are relying on TRCA for this information, so these updated layers should be the corporate layers and evolve as we collect more data.

Have these layers been updated to the GIS "plandev" site ... this is what the planners use to screen sites ... ?
